

CLAIMS

What is claimed is:

A method of treating carcinomas, melanomas, colorectal cancer, ovarian cancer, and any other susceptible type of cancer employing a composition comprising about 6.7 grams of resorcinol by weight, about 5 grams of camphor by weight, about 2.1 grams of sodium sulfathiazole by weight, and about 86.2 grams of propylene glycol by weight;

said composition is applied employing saturated cotton swabs inserted and allowed to remain 4 to 5 minutes in contact with sublingual and rectal tissues:

this procedure is administered morning and evening for two days and may be repeated, if desired, since there are no side effects other than a 5 to 10 second stinging sensation;

for visible cutaneous tumors, the composition is applied directly.
